

Tyler Routt “Gamer” All Stars

Introduction: EGBR has been doing the Tyler Routt all-stars since 2006. The idea was that we honored our post season all-stars every year but invariably some deserving hard charger got left off the roster. We have always spent a lot of time and effort coaching those less skilled and teaching them the game. The self-starters, good attitude kids who had good journeyman skills were left alone because coaches were occupied with the bottom of the line up guys and teaching as well as the top of the lineup and front-line pitchers trying to refine their skills for immediate use. Sometimes these top players didn't have the drive of the Gamers who were not regulars in the post season all stars. EGBR decided to honor these “Gamers” with journeyman skills in the name of a baseball loving kid who played for EGBR from age 12 until he aged out of the Senior Babe Ruth at 19. Tragically a little over a year after his last Senior Babe Ruth game he was killed in an auto accident. Tyler Routt was not the best player on the field but arguably he was the best teammate. He pitched well, he hit well including some home runs, and he could field and run. But perhaps what stood out the most was his attitude, support of his teammates and his love of the game. His parents still support the league.
